

Satellite radio has freed us from searching for our type of programming as we travel around home and long distances. The ability to listen to our choice of programming without constant commercial interruption is invaluable. And as we approach a larger city we can tune in for up-to-the minute traffic and weather information to make the transit with minimum delay and avoid trying to find local information on local commercial venues. Preventing the transmission of any information on XM is usurping our right to the information we want and need and our freedom of choice to listen to what we want. In Germany they burned the books!
